We may further point out for the more liberal policy has been adopted and the exaction of security from whereas the Bill requires that whenever publishers has been abandoned even in declaration of any kind is to be made under England itself. It is generally supposed that the colonies are a little more advanced fore the Registrar-a process which necesin their ideas than the mother country, but sarily takes up the time not only of the the Attorney-General apparently thinks we person making the declaration but also of n Hongkong ought still to cling to the castan important public officer, -in England reoff legislative garments of the latter and lag gistration can be effected by letter. These, half a century behind the times. Touching this question of security, let us take as an illustration of our argument a somewhat the general principle of the Bill, which, we analogous case though in a widely different maintain, is wholly objectionable. field. In the interests of the public safety the Legislature has imposed certain restrictions on the storage of gunpowder, kerosine, and other dangerous goods. No security, eleven o'clock when His Excellency the Adminhowever, is exacted from those engaged in trade in these articles that they will comply with the regulations; it is assumed as a matter of course that the pains and penalties steamer Merionethshire, from London, &c., left attaching to infringement are sufficient to compel observance. The laws which protect the life and property of the individual likewise protect his reputation, French mail, left Saigon at one o'clock yesand any person, whether a newspaper publisher or of any other occupation, who commits a libel is liable to a criminal presecution or a suit for damages. But the Attorney-General says in effect that this is not sufficient, that it is to be presumed all newspaper publishers are by nature libellers, and that they must be called upon to give security to keep their evil propensities within the limitations imposed by law. It is said that great quantities of silk are still stapled in the interior. Some of the Annamite silk, especially that from Quinhon, is stated to be superior to the best Chinese; but in consequence of the disturbances it cannot reach the coast-The salt supply from Quinhon also threatens to run short for the same reason. It is considered doubtful therefore, whether the two German steamers Alwine and Marie, which left Tourane, lately, will find cargo enough to make the trip pay. Nominally there are only the two ports of Quinhon and Tourane open to trade on the coast of Annam, put practically it is, I understand, only a question of arrangement between the Chinese compradore and the Annamite Mandarin at the other ports to admit foreign ships. Only very lately the French Director-General of Customs for Annam returned to Tourane by steamer Marie after a close inspection of the whole Annamite coast, and it has been decided to open ten more ports as soon as possible. This moans, of course, that ten more French Custom Houses will be established in Annam, and as a special treaty between France and the puppet king on the throne at Hué provides that the Customs revenues are to go to the French, Government to-. wards the expenses of occupying the country, this contribution is not to be despised. Assuming that France, with her Indo-Chinese possession; since messages oven if sent across Asiatic Russin to Vladimunication via Constantinople and the Porsian land lines with India and thence with Singapore, to Aden via Bombay. On the other hand, since France could in no case feel assured of communication with Saigon and Tonquin-messages for either having to pass through Hongkong or Singapore—the supposed measure might not only recommend itself, but might perhaps be supplemented by an effort to cut the Persian Gulf line to Kurrachee, the Aden-Bombay, the Madicas-Penang, and the Rangoon-Penang lines, the total effect of which would be to telegraphically isolate England from India and India from Penang and Singapore, with the incidental result, of seriously interfering with Dutch interests in Java, Spanish interests in the Philippines, and possibly German interests at Zanzibar. Supposing, however, that it was open to England to communicate vid Russia and Vladivostock, a further cable-cutting in the Yellow Sea or at Foochow and Amoy would be needed to isolate Hongkong. The North American cables might remain intact, since they deeply affect American interests, while they are relatively less vulnerable on account of their multiplicity and great depth. Again, to cut the West Indian cable would be to interrupt communication with the French islands; but, since all messages pass through Jamaica. France might elect to cut the line between Kingston and Santinge, Cuba, ignoring the interests of the owners of islands to the westwards, but would have further to out the Colon-Kingston line to isolate Jamaica. England, on her part, might attempt to cut the Brest cables, thus concentrating all communication with North America at Falmouth and Valentia: while she would probably cut the Senegal line between the Canacies and St. Louis. The two cables from Marseilles to Algiers and from Marseilles to Bona might similarly be threatened by England, but the military advantages of outting an enemy's communications diminish with their length and the operations would not be particularly valuable. Russia could hope for little from cables in a war with England, and all her own communications being interior land lines, she might elect might seek to isolate Hongkong and the A telegraph line connects Tourane and Hué, Australian colonies, she could not interfere with the lines-west-of-Singapore without touching French interests in Cochin-China and Tonquin, interruption north of Saigon, between Java and

THE LIMITS OF THE PRESENT EXPECTATIONS OF IRELAND.

The following is a passage from a letter by Michael Davitt: I see no real danger in Mr. Paraell's taking the initiative in this matter. He has already most extreme Trish Nationalist does not expect him to ask total separation from the English Empire. This, the only just, logical, and final solution of the Irish problem, is not possible is not improbable that the time may come, he does not love her. even in this generation of rapid change when it may be to Eugland's advantage to ship with an independent Ireland, rather than continue in a relationship which must always be one of more or less discontent to the weaker nation, and consequently a proportionate danger to the prestige and welfare of the greater. That time, however, has not yet arrived. the establishment of such a modus vivendi between Great Britain and Ireland as would be temporarily acceptable to the two peoples would in no way jeopardize the principle of Irish national independence or postpone the chances of its ultimate realization. What Mr. Parnell's proposal aught to be is clearly enough understood in Ireland, and is sufficiently known to the course here suggested. The scheme of Federal home rule, which was the basis of Isaac Butt's movement, with its House of Lords on the one hand (which would practically mean a House of landlerds), and therefore, an anti-national assembly, and with its continued imperial representation on the other, with a consequent participation by Ireland Honore, who was reduced from affluence to povin every deed and policy of the empire, was never cordially endorsed by the people of Ireland, because repugnant to Irish Nationalist conviction. The only advantage, from a national point of view, which the constitution of Grattan's Parliament would have over that of Federal home rule | it good. The ex-millionaire vowed he could not would be the absence of an Irish representation in Wostminster. This, however, is but a negative advantage. A Parliament after Grattan's constitution would give us a House of Lords; and the spirit of Irish democracy is now so pronounced against any such dual Legislature, or the giving of a veto power to any such class as would be certain to be members of an "Upper House," that the onfire Irish Parliamentary party, which | regular course of collection. The origin of these beds was stated by the late Professor Milne Edwards to have been wholly accidental. A schooner with a cargo of oysters from Portugal sailed up the Gironde river to reach Bordeaux and unload. But on reaching port the systems -those on the surface at least-were found to be dead and putrefying: So the schooner was ordered to return and dump.its cargo into the strike a roof near the mouth of the Gironde, and saved themselves a fifty-mile sail and the job of unloading by dropping the oysters through a hole in the hull. Not very long afterward the Trish people abroad to justify him taking the Gascon fishermen were astonished to find rich and under proper care and retransplantation the Cancala and Marenne oysters, at eighteen to thirty-six cents a dozen.

POST-OFFICE NOTICES.

When Correspondence has been mis-sent or delayed (both of which are liable to happen occasionally) all that the addressee need do is to note on the cover, Sent to ----, or Received at 7 p.m., or as the case may be, and forward it, without any other writing whatever, to the Postmaster General. This should be acted on the first time cause of complaint occurs; it is a mistake to let such matters pass for fear of giving trouble, a course which generally gives more trouble in the end.

The Postal Guide for 1836, revised to date will be found in the Daily Press Directory. p. 385 large edition, p. 701 small edition. This s the only authorised complete Summary of Postal information published in Hongkong.
